Andalusia,

a key region in the aerospace sector

Andalusia is the second exporting region in Spain in aeronautics industry, with 2.569 million euros in 2019, 1,73% of Andalusia's GDP.

Around 146 aeronautical companies operate in Andalusia and employ more than 14,500 specialists. Andalusia, together with Toulouse and Hamburg is the third point in Europe and the only one in Spain, where the manufacturing and assembly of a large plane (A400M) is completed. For this reason, as well as for the turnover, it is considered as the third aeronautical pole in Europe, strengthened by the presence of Airbus Group which is developing significant projects in the military transport segment in the region, such as the final assembly line of the A400M, C235 and C295 as well as part of the construction of the Airbus A380.

Andalusia also hosts major Spanish tier-one suppliers, Aciturri, Alestis and Aernnova, who provide manufactured components such as aero structures, composite and metallic parts as well as engineering and other services to projects such as the Eurofighter Typhoon or Boeing's B737.

They also provide opportunities for the many other aerospace suppliers located in Andalusia. Andalusia is also one of Europe's leading locations for the development and testing of Unmanned Aerial Systems (UAS). "Atlas", the only UAS Experimental Flight Centre in Spain, is located here and offers a reserved airspace of 35x30 km as well as a main runway of 800 metres that is suitable for light UAVs. The Spanish government has recently chosen Andalusia as the location for "CEUS", Spain's UAS centre of excellence that will also have a runway for heavy UAVs.
